Next CJCA Meeting - 7:30 p.m. Tuesday Mar 26th, 2002 at the Clara Barton Community Center:

Agenda for next CJCA Meeting -
(1) Meeting with County representatives on operating hours and future of the Community Center.

Summary of Minutes from Feb. 26, 2002 CJCA Meeting:

1. Operating Hours of Clara Barton Community Center - Attendees voted to send a letter to the County asking that more funding be provided to the Community Center so as to avoid cutbacks on operating hours. (A letter was sent to the County Recreation Dept (with a copy to the County Council) in this regard.)

Recently the County has indicated that they are willing to work with volunteers if that proves to be the only viable option that would serve the community's purposes. While CJCA continues to ask the County to restore the necessary funding, it is worthwhile to determine what volunteer resources our community could provide. Please contact Burr Gray (burr.gray@alum.dartmouth.org) if you can volunteer any time, either on a one-time basis or on a continuing basis, during the following hours in particular: Monday - 8-11 a.m., Wed 8 - 10 a.m., Friday - 8-12 noon, and Saturday 3-6 p.m, and Sunday 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. The County does not see the Center being used a lot during these hours. No need to call if you have already expressed a willingness to help.

2. Sewer Stink - it was noted that a draft Environmental Assessment (EA) on impacts of various options to address the smell from the Potomac Intercepter Sewer (that runs along the Canal) is being circulated among the relevant governmental agencies prior to release to the public for comment. Of interest to Cabin John residents, the draft EA will likely indicate that there are two options on where to place one of the carbon filters intended to remove the smell from the sewer gas. One location would be at Lock 10, and another possible location would be by the Beltway. Cabin John residents have already made their preference clear in a meeting about one year ago that they prefer the Beltway location, but we will have the opportunity to make a formal comment once the EA is released to the public.

Potomac River/C&O Canal Cleanup at Lock 8 Lockhouse April 6

The Potomac Conservancy, in conjunction with the Alice Ferguson Foundation, will be cleaning up the Potomac River on April 6th (9:00 a.m. - 12:00 noon) at certain local sites, including Lockhouse 8 and Minnie's Island in Cabin John.

The Cabin John Citizens Association has taken on the task of cleaning the section between Lockhouse 8 and the Beltway, so we need some volunteers, especially those with canoes and boats. Last year, we had about 20 Cabin John residents show up, some with canoes, some without. We hope to have a good turnout again. Some folk used their time to clean up areas along the Canal as well.

If you are interested, meet at Lockhouse 8 at 9:00 a.m. on April 6 (a Saturday). Gloves will be provided, but bring your own if you have them.

The Potomac Conservancy is also looking for a place to store one 6-canoe trailer (with canoes) on a continuing basis. If you have a spare parking spot, and you wouldn't mind having the Conservancy pick up and drop off the trailer from time to time, please contact Matt Berres - 703.276.2777 ext. 203, berres@potomac.org It would be a big help to the group and their activities.

Thanks From Diane Leatherman

Diane Leatherman, a long time Cabin Johner who helps with just about every important community effort, wanted to convey her appreciation for all of the calls, cards, flowers (one of the bouquets was sent by CJCA), and other support that the community has extended to her recently. Diane recently underwent surgery for cancer and will have to go through chemotherapy in the future. Diane's daughters have arrived to help their mom, who, it should be noted, along with other illustrious career achievements is a former CJCA President.

Creek Week Coming At End of April

Just a heads up that the Friends of Cabin John Creek Watershed (FOCJCW) has several events planned at the end of April to highlight our lovely Cabin John Creek.

The quarterly water monitoring will take place on April 20th (9:30 -11:30 a.m. at various locations along the Creek), and the annual spring Creek Cleanup, in coordination with the Cabin John Citizens Assn., is scheduled for April 27th (9:30 - 12:00 noon).

FOCJCW is hoping to have a presentation made by WSSC on April 23 regarding the status of the sewer that runs along the Creek (parts of the structure have become exposed over the years), and hopes to also have a presentation then by the County on the County's stormwater control and creek restoration effort.

Please contact local resident Roy Seidenstein (focjcw@earthlink.net) if you would like to get involved in the water sampling effort, or local resident Meredith Schoen (merrywrites@aol.com) if you want to help organize a Creek cleanup site. More info is available on the FOCJCW updated website - www.cabinjohn.org/focjcw

House Concert Series to Begin

Being a musician, I sometimes receive calls from other musicians who are coming to the Washington, D.C. area. It recently occurred to a group of us that we should assemble a list of names and phone numbers of those who would be interested in attending folk music house concerts here inCabin John. A fee would be charged and that money would go directly to the musician.

The first house concert is scheduled for Wednesday night, April 17th. Ken Perlman, world reknowned old-time banjo player and finger picking guitar player is going to be in town.

If you are interested in coming to this house concert and being on the list of folks I will call for future concerts, call Reed Martin - 301-229-3482.

LOOKING BACKWARD IN CABIN JOHN

By Andrew E. Rice

Who Lived Here Before John Smith Arrived?

Cabin John's recorded history may be said to have begun with the exploration of the Potomac River by Captain John Smith (of Jamestown fame) in 1608. But our area had been inhabited for centuries -- indeed, for millennia -- before his arrival.

Archeologists date the earliest habitation back to around 8000 BC when the retreating glaciers left a climate essentially the same as ours today. Little is known about these earliest inhabitants (the so-called "Archaic Period"), although a site on Ruppert Island, just southeast of today's Glen Echo Park, has been identified as part of the "Susquehannah Soapstone Culture" dating back to about 1600 BC. Around 1000 BC began a period now labeled the "Woodland Period." Plants began to be domesticated and agricultural villages emerged, while pottery replaced the stone vessels of the earlier period.

The American "Indians" -- the Native Americans -- who were living here at the time the Europeans arrived were themselves fairly recent arrivals, having appeared about 300 years earlier. As far as we know now, there was no permanent settlement where Cabin John stands today; this seems to have been a hunting area, with only transient camps established, although further down the Potomac there were established villages. The Piscataways were the predominant tribe of this area; although they did do extensive hunting and fishing, they were primarily agriculturalists and were less mobile than some other tribes, since they used dugout canoes rather than the birchbark canoes found elsewhere. Beyond the Cabin John area, to the west, there were the Susquehannocks and the Senecas in what is now upper Montgomery County.

After John Smith's visit (and his oft-quoted enthusiastic description of the area), European traders appeared. Generally, trading was peaceful, but in 1622 an Indian village at the mouth of the Anacostia River was burned down. The following year, one of the experienced traders, Henry Spelman, was captured and beheaded, and in 1625 another trader, Henry Fleet, was also captured. He was held for five years, but apparently was not mistreated, for after his release he returned again in 1631 to engage in the beaver trade (and later, since he knew the region and the Indian language, to become the guide and interpreter for Leonard Calvert when Calvert arrived with the first 220 settlers).

Writing in his journal in 1631, here is how Fleet described our region: "This place without all question is the most pleasant and healthful in all this country, and most convenient for habitation, the air temperate in summer and not violent in winter. It aboundeth in all manner of fish. The Indians in one night commonly will catch 30 sturgeon in a place where the river is not above 12 fathom broad; and as for deer, buffaloes, bears, turkeys, the woods do swarm with them, and the soil is exceedingly rich."

Nearly three centuries later, the McMillan Commission, which produced the 1902 plan for developing the Federal City, declared: "The best scenery lies beyond [the District Line], especially in the neighborhood of Cabin John Creek and in the region just above and below Great Falls." We live in a beautiful area!

Cabin John Directory Update - Volunteers Still Needed Advertising Sought

While we are most of the way through updating the names and addresses of residents, we could use a few last volunteers to check no more than 25 addresses for northwest Cabin John (Persimon Tree/Carraway St./81st St area) and the Tomlinson Ave/Terrace and Cabin Road areas.

We also need people to check the data regarding County and local resources, and people to help pick photos to go in the book and to do some layout work.

Finally, we need someone to work with the local merchants about advertising. Regarding advertising inside the updated Directory, the cost is $100 for a full page (does not include inside of front and back covers), and $50 for a half page. Please contact Bruce Wilmarth (301-229-8528, fax 301-229-6239) if you want to buy an ad or can help data checking.

GRANT PETERS

by Barbara Martin

Grant Peters was born in London. "It was a neighborhood of flats-in the US we would say apartments-and working class people. I ran with a pretty rough bunch."

Grant's father was Welsh. Still in their teens, he and his brother left their mining jobs in Wales and, without money for transportation, walked to London, where they found work as bricklayers. His father also did some professional boxing, and got Grant into Boys Club boxing at a young age.

"Our family's ties to Wales were strong. I had aunts, uncles, and cousins there, and every summer we went back to Wales." When Grant was 15, his mother died. His older sisters, who had come to the United States working for the World Bank, urged him to join them. "It was a very hard year for me. I lost my mother, then I said goodbye to my father and I never saw him again. He died a few years later when I was in the Army. And I arrived in a totally new place that wasn't anything like London."

"I came to Washington, moved in with my sisters near Dupont Circle, and started at Western High School (now Duke Ellington School of the Arts). I got a lot of guff for my accent, and there were remarks about the Slimy Limey. But I had been boxing for quite a few years, and there was enough anger in me that I would fight anybody; the teasing didn't last long." In London, he had played soccer, cricket, and rugby. At Western, that translated into football.

"Then both of my sisters got married, and for a while I moved in with my uncle (the one who had walked to London), but we really didn't get along. My salvation was the mother of a school friend who made me welcome at her home. She had foster children and was always taking in kids who needed a good place. I needed a mother very badly-more than I realized. She lived on Dana Place, off Macarthur Boulevard in Washington. I'll always be grateful to her."

Grant was drafted at 18 and sent to Army bases in Texas and Kansas. "Because I wasn't a U.S. citizen, I couldn't be sent to Vietnam. I was in charge of maintenance of the Honest John rocket and launcher, a weapon with nuclear capabilities."

Discharged in 1967 after his 2-year stint, Grant came back to Washington and got a job as Chief Property Clerk for D.C. libraries, keeping track of all equipment in the system.

It was time for college. Between graduating from high school and going into the Army, he had worked in the Physical Education department at Georgetown Day School. So he enrolled in the PE course at DC Teachers College. But after a year he left for California. "It was 1969, height of the hippie wave. I was 23, so I grew my hair long and took off with some friends for the Land of the Laidback-Los Angeles. We worked as carpenters, fixing up people's houses. Our contractor was a guy named Harrison Ford; we put a new roof on his house. That's when he was married to his first wife and not yet so famous. I made good money and spent it all. I'd had enough after a year and came back."

He came back specifically to Phyllis Magrab, whom he had met and fallen in love with when she was in an acting class near where he was living downtown. By now Phyllis was in Rockville with her three children, Kylee, Ryan, and Brendan. She and Grant made a match that has lasted 31 years.

"We saw a house-for-sale ad in the paper, on 79th Place in Cabin John. It was big enough for us and had a great yard. Camplair's farm was right in back of us. That was 1971. We raised the kids here and added on space over the years."

He entered Montgomery College and got his AA in recreation leadership. At the same time he drove the school bus for Green Acres School where the three kids were students. For a while he did carpentry work in the remodeling of Kramerbooks and Afterwords, then became food manager for the store. With his degree in hand, he took a job as gym teacher at a residential school for special ed kids, attached to the Dominion Hospital at Seven Corners. He added social studies teaching to his gym classes, and stayed at the school for 14 years.

Enrolled in Goddard College, Grant did an independent study program, much of it by correspondence, and, in a year and a half, earned his B.A. in psycho-educational studies, followed by an M.A. in education at the University of Virginia and certification as a special education teacher.

"In 1991, the Dominion Hospital downsized and dropped their school unit. In hindsight, I know it was a good thing for me; I didn't realize that I was getting burned out. So what to do now? I had always had a good rapport with kids, and decided I'd like to be a counselor. That meant a degree in social work, so I enrolled in that program at Catholic University. I wasn't the typical graduate student there-I wasn't young and I wasn't Catholic. But it was a good program and in 2 years I had my second master's degree-this one in social work."

His former boss had started a separate school in Fairfax County, a school for children who were severely emotionally disturbed and/or had serious learning disabilities. She asked Grant to join the staff, and he has been one of the school's counselors for 10 years.

Twenty years ago, Grant and Phyllis bought a country place in Rappahannock County. "The kids loved it; we had three acres and a small house that had once been part of the resettlement program when mountain people were moved out of what became the Shenandoah National Park. We could see the Skyline Drive from our place. The other homes on our road were owned by old families who had lived there for generations. But they were nice to us, friendly and welcoming."

The family spent almost every weekend there, and as state residents, Ryan and Brendan went to the University of Virginia. Grant and Phyllis usually head out Friday night or Saturday morning for a weekend "in a different world." Their grandkids love visiting there. But last year, the house burned down. "We were having dinner at a restaurant in town when we heard the fire engines go by. Pretty soon somebody came in to tell us it was our house. It was a blow, but we've had it rebuilt and took the opportunity to have it done just the way we want. Phyllis designed it on the back of a napkin."

Grant's sisters are still local; one lives near American University, the other in Arlington. Brendan is a patent attorney in Westfield, NJ. He and his wife have given Grant and Phyllis two grandsons. Ryan is in McLean, working in computer systems. And Kylee lives in Ellicott City, a graphic designer and mother of their other two grandsons.

After the three offspring were grown and gone, Phyllis and Grant took an apartment in Paris where they spend their summers. Phyllis, director of the Child Health Center at Georgetown, often travels internationally for World Health Organization, and often is able to combine work assignments in Europe with stays at their Paris apartment.

"I'm a lucky man. And I love living in Cabin John."

ASTRONAUT BRINGS COSMOS TO CABIN JOHN

In early March, astronaut and local resident Greg Linteris provided the community (more than 200 people) with a really wonderful presentation regarding his experiences on two missions aboard the Columbia Space Shuttle in 1997.

The attendees at the evening soiree were treated to a 15-minute video, a series of slides, and the opportunity to quiz Greg at the end. (The best question put forth had to do with the proper response if someone vomits in space. Greg's astute answer noted that consolation of one's sick comrade plays an important role in addition to the cleanup.)

Everyone felt as though they were getting a real inside look at the Shuttle program. The kids collected some great items donated by NASA's Goddard Space Center, including book covers and the NASA decal stickers. CJCA kicked in some freeze-dried space food, along with the usual excellent refreshments. (Our apologies to whatever family ended up with the freeze-dried pizza or french fries. Hope your kids didn't make you eat too much of that.)

Greg stayed around for a long time after his presentation to sign autographs for everyone.

We got lots of help on equipment requirements from the community. Jim Gilchrist did the sound system (including a wireless mike) and threw in some Byrd's "Hey, Mr. Spacemen" and Elton John's "Rocket Man" to get people in the right mood before the event. Werner Schumann and Lynn Hopkins loaned their slide projectors. Scott Lewis provided a video projector. These contributions saved CJCA about $500 that would otherwise have gone to equipment rental. Juliet Rodman generously adjourned her exercise class a few minutes early to let the crowd in. Many, many thanks to everyone else who helped with the chairs and cleanup afterward.

What A Party! The Cabin John Bridge Re-Opening Celebration

Now that a little time has passed and we can apply some historical perspective, the November Bridge Reopening still stands out as one of the most excellent CJCA events ever.

We had parades. We had politicians. We had ribbon cuttings. We had free hot dogs, subs, cider, and apples. And we had great weather, particularly for a mid-November Day. Oh yes, and did we forget to mention that the Army Corps and their contractors finished the bridge renovation work beautifully and over one month ahead of schedule. At the end of the day, the Cabin John Bridge was back in business.

A lot of people pitched in to make this event happen. Starting with the two parades, the Cabin John side was organized by Ruth & John Rabner, Reed & Barbara Martin, Robert Patch, Gabrielle Herderschee-Hunter, Alysa Dortort, Karen Melchar, & Lori Rieckelman. Ruth also provided those great and very popular "I Love the Bridge" stickers. (By the way, that sticker was the first thing Doug Duncan asked for upon his arrival in our humble community.)

The Glen Echo group was organized and led by Carlotta Anderson, who is also editor of Glen Echo's local newsletter, the Echo.

Publicity was coordinated by Derick Moore, who also arranged to get the large American flag for the bridge from Mr. Chapman Dugger, General Manager of Ourisman Ford in Motor City Drive, Baltimore. The Potomac Outdoors crew helped make sure that the flag didn't fly away in the event of a strong breeze. Gabrielle Herderschee-Hunter did our press release.

Refreshments were organized and handled by CJ resident Jeannie Austin and Ralph Osborne from Marketplace on the Blvd. The crowd went wild for the food, which included 300 donuts from Montgomery Bakers, and five 5-ft subs from Glen Echo subs (they gave us a break on the price), 200 hotdogs, 80 apples and lots of cider and soft drinks. Jeannie's helpers included her husband Richard Lazarus and son Sam, and her Longridge Court neighbors Susan Dougherty and Rick Hatch, Joe Biegel, Rachelle Cherol, Kathleen Stevenson (Arden St), and Mary Beardsley and Michael Jasnou (Barkwater Court).

In addition, we strongly suspect that the following folks also helped by bringing cookies, Lorraine Minor, Karen Melkar, Linda Posilkin, and Shelly Rudick & Richard Taft.

As always, Ralph contributed his own time and resources to a CJCA event by cooking hot dogs and heating the cider. Laverne Baptist, our Post Office Manager, assisted Ralph and did her best to make sure that the hot dogs did not leave the grill until cooked, which was a challenge given the hungry mob. Pepperidge Farm donated the hot dog buns. The Bethesda Coop, Helen Atkocious - Manager, donated 10 gallons of cider plus a whole box-load of delicious apples (88 to be exact).

We're getting spoiled by Jim Gilchrist, who provided the sound system and some very patriotic tunes. Jim's contribution would not have been nearly as effective without the electricity for the event coming from Cabin John Gardens residents AJ and Jess MacIntyre (yellow house next to the bridge). (Donna Roberts did some serious schmoozing to try to get us a high school band, but most of the talented local kids were trying out for the County band that weekend. Nina Weissberg offered to have her husband Stewart play the bass but we'll save that for another occasion.)

Chairs and tables were provided by Deborah Beers, Mayor of Glen Echo, and these were picked up and returned by Danny Harris and Margaret Castle, John Rabner, and Burr Gray. The chalk for the street drawing and other kids' entertainment was organized by Amal Bekdash.

Those very popular Cabin John Bridge T-Shirts were created and sold for CJCA by Barbara Quinn and Susan Graham. The profit from those sales contributed greatly toward covering the cost of the event. (If you missed out on the t-shirts, they will be back for sale at the Crab Feast in Sept.) The proceeds from the sale of the Flag pins and American flag t-shirts run by Sarah Cahil, Carol Mundy & Robin Mee went to benefit the Bannockburn Tech center and Pentagon victims of the terrorist attack.

The three educational/historical panels that you have probably seen next to the bridge were designed and executed by Ger Quinn, based in large part on prior work done by Ger and Peter Vogt. Ger also designed the base for the display, which is modeled on the beautiful and graceful curve of the bridge and was prepared and installed by the Army Corps of Engineers. The Corps personnel involved in that effort included Paul Christianson, Bernard E. White, Ronald L. Cornell, George F. Eimer, and Glenn S. Bates. Gary Barnhard provided the multi-colored parachute that heightened the suspense of the occasion by covering the panels until their unveiling. Finally, it must also be said that Dave Murphy and Jay Jennings had the original idea of honoring the bridge in some fashion so as to make people more aware of its architectural and historic significance.

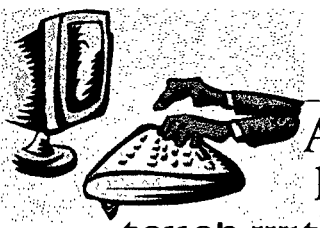

We had a number of speakers and honored guests at the event. Our speakers in order of appearance included: CJCA Pres. Burr Gray, Nathan Cole (Project Manager - Army Corps Washington Aqueduct Division), Harry Ways (former Corps' Aqueduct Division Chief & Corps Historian), County Executive Doug Duncan, and Congresswoman Constance Morella. Our honored guests included: Andrea Sincoff (Executive Director of the B-CC Regional Services Center), Senator Brian Frosh, Delegate William Bronrott, Mayor Deborah Beers (Town of Glen Echo), David W. Miller (biographer of Montgomery C. Meigs and author of the book Second Only to Grant), Steve Malloch (President of the Brookmont Civic Association), Geert E. Van Brandt (President of the Bannockburn Citizens Assn), David Eppron (VP of Glen Echo Heights Citizens Assn.).

Bob Epstein took a beautiful long distance photo of the bridge with the residents perched on top and the flag flying in front that was turned into a sturdy 12" X 18" full color poster by Anaconda Press. (see black/white reduced size version on page 8) If interested in purchasing a poster, please send a check for $10 payable to Cabin John Citizens Assn. to CJCA, PO Box 31, Cabin John, MD 20818. We'll also have these posters for sale at CJCA events and elsewhere - you'll want to see it in color - - it is a great shot!

The conclusion of the day ended with the car parade across the bridge - Reed Martin brought out his ancient machine, Jim Anderson (Glen Echo) followed with his vintage mobile, and Bruce Wilmarth had his spiffy Mercedes ready for the flag.

And finally, if you really want to know who to really thank for the event, you can send an e-mail to the contractor who completed the restoration work ahead of schedule: Bill Cox, President, Corman Construction, BCox@CormanConstruction.com.
